happy campers

Every year we dig out our two man tent and three or four times during the summer Charlie and Eliza camp out in the garden. They sleep in the tent but leave Honey and myself outside keeping guard.

happy days

Although this piece was inspired by the sight of Eliza spending hour after hour on the swing, it is also of course one of the classic images of childhood.

high hopes

The children always let their balloons go and are then mesmerised by their journey. It does always seem like a miniature great escape as they disappear into the beyond.

Go Faster Stripes

A racing green Mini Cooper was the pride and joy of my neighbour. Unfortunately I reversed into the front lights and managed to drop a wardrobe onto the roof when we were moving house. Next time he saw us coming he hightailed it off down the street. Somehow our friendship survived and 'Go Faster Stripes' was born.

Memory Lane

This piece was created in my mind well before I painted it, when Suzi and I were walking through the countryside one day talking about the derelict cottage we were hoping to buy which is now our home.

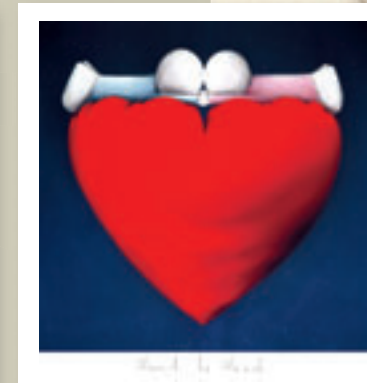

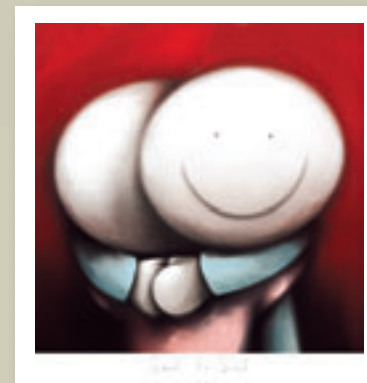

The long awaited 'Heart and Soul' 160 page book

This long-awaited and beautiful book represents a tribute to an inspirational talent. It offers all kinds of new insights into his thought processes, as well as sharing many of the stories that create the mosaic of Doug's world.

The Family

I look forward to continually producing artwork about my wife and my children. I would like to think that in years to come it will remind them all of how very much we mean to each other.

Scarf-face

I love the fact that the natural sheen and reflective surface of this piece gives me a sense of looking in a mirror, and seeing my own smile reflected back at me.
